

In the abstract:

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A convertible includes an automobile body and a roof with a rear roof part which extends at least between a belt line and an upper roof part located above a passenger compartment. The roof includes an upper roof part located above a passenger compartment and a middle roof section that encloses a rear window. The middle section is located between lateral main posts of the automobile body when the roof is closed. The middle roof section is rotationally connected with both the automobile body and the upper roof part.